Haiku Hike

saguaro brazos
stretch to June’s sun: barrio translation: son primos

- Steven Alvarez

Metamorphosis
Haiku Hike

Metamorphosis

the end of gossip
the grasses we sit upon gathering coolness

- Ramesh Anand
Flycatcher is gone.
Skies are blue with ghosts today,
Above new stories.

- Carolee Asia
mayfly nymph
she begins to speak about that miscarriage

- Florin C. Ciobica
Haiku Hike

Metamorphosis

Collect mesquite beans
Grind them into fine powder Eat bread in the shade

- Isaac Flater
Haiku Hike

Metamorphosis

Sunflowers blossom
an explosion of yellow where the house once stood

- Nancy Himel
Haiku Hike

refugee camp
the morning rain turns in holy water

- Vladislav Hristov
Haiku Hike

Pima basket-
learning from the darkness woven through me

- Jonathan Humphrey
Haiku Hike

Metamorphosis

Went up the mountain Found peace and some clarity Came down the mountain

- Franklin Lane
Haiku Hike

Metamorphosis

The healing chant sang and mended all things broken against every odd.

- Araceli Montano
Haiku Hike

Metamorphosis

Mom

Who sang me to sleep, inquired, “Where, for how long?”
Now, I hold her hand.

- Naomi Ortiz
Haiku Hike

Metamorphosis

sleet becomes snow - a gasoline bomb
in the teacher’s hand

- Alan Peat
Haiku Hike

Metamorphosis

Spring’s mighty bullhorn Wait! favor the alley weed Here, my bare ankle

- Elizabeth Salper
Haiku Hike

Having worn two masks
What changed inside while inside Something seems brighter

- Audrey Scheere
hospice window . . .

willing a cloud

into a winged horse

- Julie Schwerin
Haiku Hike

Metamorphosis

an ally
for her coming out cherry blossoms

- Dan Schwerin
Haiku Hike

Metamorphosis

Tree, teach me how to let my leaves fly when my world is at its coldest

- Monique Soria
Haiku Hike

Desert penstemons
Nestled midst thorny comrades Sheltering in place

- Tawney Weir
Haiku Hike

Metamorphosis

Even the spring sun can make hard asphalt supple if it focuses.

- Vicki Wilson
Haiku Hike

in sky above dry wash- vermilion flycatcher resets my life list

- Michele Worthington