Charlotte Center City Small Business Innovation Fund Awards $1.16 Million in Second Round of Grants to 37 Businesses

Partnership Includes Charlotte Center City Partners, Founding Sponsor Honeywell, Foundation For The Carolinas, Bank of America, Duke Energy, and Knight Foundation

Fund Prepares for Round Three: $1.5 Million in Citywide Grants, Leading to a Total Distribution of More Than $4 Million; Application Window to Open Monday, October 26

CHARLOTTE, (October 23, 2020) – The Charlotte Center City Small Business Innovation Fund today announced it has awarded $1,166,000 in Round Two grants to Center City small businesses to spur and support innovation as they continue to adapt to the new economic realities caused by the COVID-19 crisis. 92% percent of the 37 second-round grantees are minority-, women- or veteran-owned businesses. These businesses join the 34 who were awarded grants in August during Round One, all located throughout Uptown, South End, Historic West End, and elsewhere in Center City Charlotte.

Each of these applications proves that small businesses in Charlotte are innovating and creating during the pandemic. Each is moving forward and making plans to share their “lessons learned” to help make other small businesses more resilient.

The Round Two grants will enable these 37 businesses to invest in new innovations and adaptations, including:

- Creating e-commerce opportunities, digital enhancements and virtual environments to better vie for consumer attention and facilitate consumer spending
- Making mobility investments to better meet customers' new routines and spending habits
- Investing in wearable technology to help with contactless delivery of services and goods
- Upgrading infrastructure to better utilize outside environments and increase consumer confidence

“We are so excited to award more grants to Center City’s entrepreneurs who add vibrancy and character to our Center City through their small businesses,” said Michael Smith, President and CEO of Charlotte Center City Partners. “The fund is now supporting more than 70 businesses investing in their future during this pandemic, which is a true testament to Center City’s future and resiliency. Once you connect those entrepreneurs and their innovative projects plus the additional programming and other projects coming online, Charlotte and Center City are poised to continue to innovate and outperform during this recovery.”

The Charlotte Center City Small Business Innovation Fund launched in June as a collaboration between Charlotte Center City Partners, Foundation For The Carolinas and founding sponsor Honeywell, which invested $2 million in the fund.

"Grants from the Small Business Innovation Fund continue to help small businesses, particularly those owned by minorities, women and veterans, adapt to ever-changing conditions and serve their customers," said Greg Lewis, Honeywell chief financial officer and chair of the Small Business Innovation Fund grant review committee. "The 71 small businesses that received grants from the Innovation Fund will make Charlotte more resilient and vibrant."

Bank of America and Duke Energy also joined as sponsors of the grant program this summer, bringing the initial fund to approximately $2.3 million. The John S. and James L. Knight Foundation also pledged $250,000 to the Center City Small Business Innovation Fund to help more businesses in Charlotte's Historic West End overcome the challenges posed by the coronavirus pandemic.

The second round of applications opened in early September. By the close of the two-week application period, there were 247 completed applications.

Round Two by the Numbers:

- 247 Applicants
- 37 Grantees
- 92% of all grantees were either minority, women, or veteran-owned businesses

The application period for Round Three opens on October 26, 2020. The funding sources for this round will be federal funding through the CARES Act and City of Charlotte. Therefore, all small businesses physically located throughout the entire City of Charlotte are eligible to apply. Details about the Small Business Innovation Fund: Round 3 – All of CLT will be available at: CharlotteCenterCity.org/InnovationFund

There will also be a Round 4 in early 2021, but details for that round will be announced in January 2021.
